

Empirical research on international student mobility: Status quo and ways forward

Interdisciplinary workshop of the research cluster “Mobility of the highly skilled”

German Centre for Higher Education Research and Science Studies GmbH (DZHW)
Lange Laube 12, 30159 Hannover, Germany

Room LL500

THURSDAY, 11 MAY 2017 (PLENARY PART)

12:30 – 13:00	Arrival of participants and welcome coffee / Short welcome note by Prof. Dr. Jungbauer-Gans
13:00 – 14:30	International student mobility flows: A social network perspective on democratization Prof. Dr. Michael Windzio, Universität Bremen, Dr. Eva Maria Vögtle, DZHW Effects of international student mobility on identity and employment outcomes Dr. Christof van Mol, Netherlands Interdisciplinary Demographic Institute (NIDI)
14:30 – 14:45	Coffee break
14:45 – 16:15	Examining determinants and career effects of international student mobility using survey data: A sociological perspective Nicolai Netz, DZHW Examining determinants and career effects of international student mobility using survey data: An economic perspective Dr. Giorgio Di Pietro, University of Westminster
16:15 – 16:30	Coffee break
16:30 – 18:00	How experiments enhance our knowledge on determinants and effects of international student mobility Dr. Knut Petzold, Otto-von-Guericke-Universität Magdeburg The impact of international student mobility on personality and relationship development: A psychological perspective Dr. Julia Zimmermann, FernUniversität Hagen